1. Giant pandas, Chinese black-and-white bears, are making a comeback, according to the International Union for Conservation of Nature (IUCN). In a recent report, the organization listed the bear species as ‘vulnerable’ after 26 years of listing it as ‘endangered’ on its Red List. However, Chinese government officials disagreed with the move, saying they did not view the status of the country’s symbol as any less critical than it has been for years.

2. The giant panda population reached an estimated low of fewer than 1,000 bears in the early 1980s because of deforestation and hunting the species for their fur. To prevent their extinction....
